Professor: To be announced
Total contact hours: 54 hours
Credit: 4

Course Description

This course is an introductory survey of world history, by which is meant a historical overview of major processes and interactions in the development of human society since the development of agriculture some 10,000 years ago. The course should enable students to treat world history as an arena for study of the past that address large-scale patterns as well as local narratives, in which they can pursue their interest in various types of knowledge.

In its audience, the course is intended for undergraduate students in all majors, especially in their first two years. For this wide range of students, the course not only provides background on globalization today, but reveals the contrasting process of large-scale social interaction which take place rapidly (such as technology) as compared with those that take place slowly (such as social values).

For majors in History, the course will provide an initial step in the interactive and interdisciplinary study of the past that they will explore in more detail at advanced undergraduate levels. And for those considering a career in teaching, this course provides strong background for the world-history curriculum that is now taught in most secondary schools.
